Revenue Agent – Small Business Division:

As an IRS Revenue Agent in our SB/SE Division, you'll plan and conduct on-site examinations and investigations of individuals and small businesses to determine their federal tax liability. Working regularly with taxpayers, their representatives, certified public accountants and attorneys, you'll apply a range of financial and other investigative skills to analyze intricate and complex accounting systems, business activities and financing.

Revenue Agent – Large and Midsize Business Division

As an IRS Revenue Agent in our LMSB Division, you'll administer the tax examinations of the largest corporations in the world, frequently dealing with issues such as tax shelters, mergers and acquisitions, and global operations. You'll work closely with senior-level executives of corporate tax departments and their representatives, facing significant challenges in researching and developing tax issues, and in communicating with the taxpayers.

Special Agent – Criminal Investigation Division

As an IRS Criminal Investigation \(CI\) Special Agent, you'll combine your accounting knowledge with law enforcement skills to investigate such financial crimes as tax evasion and money laundering. Today's sophisticated criminal schemes aimed at defrauding the Government demand the analytical ability of premier financial investigators to examine complex paper trails and computerized financial records to "follow the money."

Revenue Officer

As a Revenue Officer, you'll be highly trained and responsible for collecting delinquent taxes owed and securing delinquent tax returns where taxpayers have failed to file. Your duties will involve conducting research, interviews, investigations and financial statement analysis for your assigned cases, often at the taxpayer's home or business. And, you'll counsel taxpayers on their tax obligations, ensuring that their rights are protected
